Morning, Miss Moo Story of an Ornerly Cat

By Carrie Dow

Trafford Publishing. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 16 pages. Dimensions: 8.2in. x 8.2in. x 0.1in. Carrie Dow of Lakewood, CO, has published her first book for children, Morning, Miss Moo (Story of an Ornerly Cat), by Trafford Publishing. Dow used her own cat, a stray she and her husband found behind the garage, as inspiration for the story. According to Dow, the cat causes a lot of trouble. But we still love her, she says. Pets are a lot like children, in that they do things that we dont always approve of, she states. While their actions may be inappropriate, their intentions are good. Thats what I wanted to convey in the story. The Dows named her Miss Moo because instead of saying meow like other cats, she says, moo. Its not quite meow, but its not quite mew either. Its very strange and silly, the author says. The author also says people tell her they see their own cats in Miss Moos ornerly actions. People tell me all the time that their cat does something that just drives them up the wall, yet they cant help laughing. Thats why we love them so much! Dow created the book with the help...
