We finished our loading, with some necessary clothes; and guns, pistols, and swords, to defend ourselves from wild beasts, and if we required it, to kill them for food. I gave orders for the rope to be let go: the next few moments were those of anxious silence--should we blown towards the creek, or would some current take us out to sea? This was an awful question, as we could but have expected to linger out a few days of miserable existence in such a craft at sea. She has caught the wind, said Jack. John Niger (the black) shook his head in a satisfactory manner, saying, Dis draft bery fine ship massa. Presently he thought of his son Barnabas, whom he supposed lost, and continued, Poor Barnaby, massa, he a little black cherub before de white throne now; dat bery good for him, but bery bad for poor dady John to lose him pickaninny. The tears trickled down the poor fellows face, very much like a white man s tears; he had a soft heart too like the white man s heart, capable of the God-like feeling of love and the Christlike feeling of sorrow. Poor John was not left long in doubt; presently as we turned the point we saw the three negroes standing on a rock which had...
