But all that is called divine goodness and? yirtue in the creature, is nothing else, but the one goodness of God manifesting a birth and discovery of itself in the creature, according as its created nature is fitted to receive it. This is the unalterable state between God and the creature. Goodness, for ever and ever, can only belong to God, as essential to him, and inseparable from him, as his own unity. God could not make the creature to be great and glorious in itself--this is as impossible as for God to create beings in a state of independence on himself. The heavens, saith David, declare the glory of God; and no creature, any more than the heavens, can declare any other glory, but that of God. And as well might it be said, that the firmament sheweth forth its own handy-work, as that a holy, divine, or heavenly creature, sheweth forth its own natural power. But now, if all that is divine, great, glorious, and happy, in the spirits, tempers, operations, and enjoyments of the creature, is only so much of the greatness, glory, majesty, and blessedness of God, dwelling in it, and giving forth various births of his own triune life, light and love, and through the manifold forms and capacities of the creature to receive them, then we may infallibly see the true ground and nature of all true religion; and when, and how, we may be said...
