Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: . . . to Philadelphia, settled there to what has proved to be a profitable business in 1875. ARTHUR H. FEWKES. Not many miles from Boston's busy throng, in Newton, otherwise known as the Garden City--one of those exquisitely beautiful little residential towns for which the suburbs of the old liay State capital are renowned--may be found the home and nursery grounds and greenhouses of Mr. Fewkes. The proprietor is by nature a rather reserved man, but the visitor who is interested in Chrysanthemums, and competent to talk about them intelligently, can readily remove all shyness by turning the conversation to these flowers. They are his favorites, and with a knowledge of them which I have seldom seen equalled, he delights to point out to an appreciative companion their individual merits and demerits, meanwhile commenting entertainingly on their history. Mr. Fewkes is a native of the city in which he resides, and was born in 1856. His interest in Chrysanthemums dates back to some fourteen or fifteen years ago, when it was first awakened by seeing the plants of Dr. H. P. Walcott. E. W. Wood and Joseph Clark at the exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and by reading in the Gardeners Magazine excellent accounts of the European exhibitions and other matters bearing on Chrysanthemums. These plants now became the one great object of interest to him, and he soon brought together one of the most extensive collections of them in the country. He became associated...
