The founders of New Haven avowed the leading purpose of their settlement here to be, to establish a state whose design was religion. In connection with this purpose, and to furnish the pillars of such a state, they contemplated a liberally-educated class who should be leaders and guides in religious and secular affairs. And in order to provide such a class they planned, as their records repeatedly express it, for the training up of youth, that, through the blessing of God, they might be fitted for public service in church and commonweale. Accordingly, when the settlers left Boston in 1638, taking with them a pastor and a soldier, they also took, as equally essential, a high-grade professional schoolmaster. Ezekiel Cheever, who accompanied the party, was then in his 24th year. He had been a teacher in Boston, and throughout his long life he never had or attempted any other vocation. Almost immediately after the landing, and fully a year before either church or state was organized, a school had been set up in Mr. Cheever's house. The house stood near the southeast corner of Church and Grove streets, almost within the shadow of Mr. Newmans barn, where church and state were founded in June, 1639. s The FtVrf School-house. There is good reason to believe that a school-house was built for Mr. Cheever within two or three years after 1639, though there is no direct evidence of it....
